

Who Holds the Sack?

It is now reported that Senator J. P. Jones will run again for reelection to the U. S. Senate. The question now arises, who will receive the sack and hold the campaign fund in Austin. Everybody is interested and everybody wants to know. That the sack is coming to help out the Legislative party, is said to be a forgone conclusion. But who will handle the purse strings? that is the question. Gentlemen, don't all speak at once and tell us who it is.—Sentinel.

Can't you fellows vote for a free coinage Silver Senator out there without being paid for it?

The shooting of a dog in Harlan county, Kentucky, led to a riot in which two men were killed and three wounded. But the cause was not as trivial as it would appear to be in other communities. The dog, though a worthless cur, was probably the most respectable resident of the neighborhood. The conflict was a fresh development of the old vendetta between the Howards and the Turners. The original fight in this vendetta grew out of a game of cards, and about fifty people have been killed in an effort to settle the dispute.

"Go it, shirt-tail, he is gaining on you," was the cry heard on the streets one night this week, when a person of the masculine gender might have been seen in hot pursuit of a party in rather a nude state. We failed to learn of any case of insanity in Battle Mountain, so concluded the chase was for other causes.—Battle Mountain Messenger.

We hear it announced that officers, both State and County, who have held their positions for from four to sixteen years, are still hungry for political pap, and will go before the Convention and ask that they be again honored.—Gazette.

It was ever thus. Vaux, the successor of Sam Randall in Congress, once danced with Victoria. But that is nothing. The whole Democratic party has been dancing for years to the English free-trade tune.—Sacramento Bee.

A man named Davis, foreman of the Dutton ranch, situated a mile or two from Santa Rosa, believes that employees on the place are endeavoring to poison him by placing strychnine in his coffee. He has a sample of some of the decoction placed on his breakfast table a few days ago, which he proposes to have analysed by a competent chemist.
